Brambling Wood is a spacious and secluded woodland with plenty of charm, located just a short drive from Bristol.

The woodland features a diverse mix of trees, with Douglas fir as the dominant species, complemented by a rich understory of oak, sycamore, ash, hawthorn, and holly. An ancient yew adds to the character, creating a striking contrast. Ferns, bracken, and occasional laurels form a natural boundary, offering a sense of privacy.

A wide grassy ride meanders from the entrance through the woodland, leading to a central glade – an ideal spot for woodland activities, complete with a fire pit, basic shelter, and a composting toilet. Winding trails branch off from the main glade, allowing exploration of the woodland.

Although there is a public footpath through the southern edge, it is well-confined and does not offer access to the rest of the site. Deer are frequent visitors from the larger Wrington Warren, of which Brambling Wood is a part, and can often be seen leaping through the dense ferns.

Nearby, Goblin Combe Nature Reserve is within walking distance, offering great family outings, while the town of Nailsea is a short drive away, providing essential services. The city of Bristol is also easily accessible for those seeking more urban amenities.

Ward is Wrington and the council is North Somerset.

Boundaries: The boundary is open on all sides and borders neighbouring woodland. North and west are marked with posts and pink paint. To the east and south, the boundary follows the main access track.

Access: There is excellent vehicle access all year round via a hard track and shared locked gate. Parking is possible within the woodland itself.
